Technology

Researchers at Johns Hopkins developed 25-minute training video, Removing Insult from Injury: Disclosing Adverse Events that helps to educate physicians and hospitals in how to disclose adverse events to their patients and their families. The video features short vignettes of doctors talking with patients to illustrate the best methods for disclosing medical errors. This program is helpful tool for physicians, risk managers and health care organizations.

Commercial Use

Provides education to physicians and hospitals in how to effectively disclose adverse event to patients and families.
